The vision is big and inspiring, making it hard to put the impact of the grant for both NAYOCODDI as the implementing youth organization and Mpolyabigere as the overseer: but there is always a first time for everything!

First and foremost, I wish to truthfully confirm that it's not a common practice that a grant could be issued directly to rural struggling service providers and this was a gesture of trust.

When it comes to the impact of the grant, the 21 Young people trained as peer-educators felt it important to take the lead and this broadened their scope of knowledge about SRHR as well as improving their life skills.

Our organizations were able to extend their visibility and their work in another 21 villages and 10 schools which we previously didn't have the opportunity to serve. As if that is not enough, the working experience of partnerships ranging from the district education officers, school administrations and community leadership is key to our efforts.

Since some peer educators were purposely recruited out of emerging youth community associations, this availed an opportunity for continuity especially after the end of the programme and hence they can build on the skills they have attained to reach out to wider community.

As Trainer of Trainer staff, there was a high sense of ownership of the SHARE programme and the enabling funds towards the project were a blessing.

Acknowledgement goes to the RSSAF team for trusting us and enabling us reach to previously underserved communities and for building the capacity of a youth full generation. Thanks you again and we look forward to working with you on bigger projects in the future!
